REPORT

SUPERINTENDING SCHOOL COMMITTEE

OF PEMBROKE.

Your Committee respectfully submit the following brief report :

The past year has been one, varying from almost total failures, to almost perfect successes. It might, perhaps, have been better, had some of our schools had no being ; while others have proved highly beneficial to intellectual improvement, and exerted the most salutary moral influence. Some schools have barely maintained a nominal existence, while others have seized, fed and fattened upon the intellectual prey, secured by the well directed efforts of the teacher, combined with the diligent perseverance of the scholar.

But where lies the blame for the failures ? and where the remedy ? The blame may not be charged exclusively to one individual, or class of individuals, but admits of distribution.

Scholars are not always disposed to do as well as they know ; while some are not properly managed and instructed by parents, in relation to school duties ; hence, some of the failures.

Districts, as a whole, are not sufficiently interested in securing convenient and properly furnished school rooms, for the most successful physical and mental development of the pupils ; nor is all the interest manifested on the part of parents, by personal presence during school sessions, which is desirable. Not enough attention is given to the choice of persons for Prudential Committees, who are qualified for, and disposed to do the duties of the office faithfully.

Prudential Committees err when they sacrifice the good of the district to personal preference—to a desirable situation for a relative or particular friend.

Some teachers are not in all respects fitted for the places they occupy. While they may succeed in one place, they would fail in another. Others are fit for no place as teachers, by nature or acquirements ; and it is more practicable for Prudential Committees to make use of preventives, than pleasant for Superintending Committees to apply a remedy ; and the chances are against the application.

If districts instruct their agents to procure cheap teachers, they must expect to be supplied from a refuse class of old teachers, so called, or those entirely inexperienced, and perhaps of doubtful literary attainments. More than half our summer teachers the past year were from such classes, and some of them poorly qualified at that. Is it then to be wondered at if universal success has not been the result.

Some of our young teachers have done well, and deserve commendation. We do not object to trying one or two new teachers each season; but half a dozen is more than our part; it costs the town too much to break them in.

We are aware of the difficulty of securing good and well tried teachers in the smaller districts, on account of the shortness of the schools. But cannot some of the districts, for instance Numbers 4, 5 and 9, secure the services of one such teacher, to commence in one of the districts, and expend the money of that district; then remove to the second, then to the third, each district extending the privilege of attendance to the children of each of the other districts? In this way the teacher might find sufficient length of school for one season; and though the term for each district would be considerably shortened, there would be the advantage of a good teacher, and the aggregate of instruction, and good derived by the three thus combined, might far exceed the present aggregate.

The law is not very specific in relation to the qualifications of teachers. Your Committee have, therefore, made use of a supposed discretionary power, vested in them, and given conditional certificates to persons for some schools, to whom they would not have given certificates for some other schools. If we have done wrong in this, attribute the error to the head and not to the heart. If the practice, which, by the way, is adopted in other towns, be considered objectionable, the surest way to correct it will be for the districts to pay the teachers they employ a compensation equal to the qualifications required and paid for in the larger districts. Should such be made the standard, we fear some of the districts must for a time be minus a teacher. We commend the plan of employing good, energetic female teachers in several of the districts for the winter term; but believe No. 1 and No. 8 cannot to advantage long do without a firm, decided and energetic male teacher.

The winter schools as a whole are far in advance of the summer, and compare favorably with any winter within our knowledge. No. 8 is somewhat straitened for school room, and all are more or less destitute of necessary furniture, fixtures and apparatus. Anything that may assist in awakening thought, fixing the attention, or aiding the understanding, is a valuable acquisition to the school room. We should be glad to see them all furnished with good Outline Maps to begin with. A change in reading books begins to be demanded, and may call for some attention from the next Committee. Tardiness and inconstant attention are two crying evils, which we call upon parents and guardians to correct. If you intend to send your child to school to the amount of six weeks, during the summer or winter term of twelve weeks, we pray you let it be done in six consecutive weeks; yea, rather give him four weeks constant attendance and then stop, than scatter six or seven weeks through twelve.

We have thus hinted at a few of the causes of failure, and suggested, or left the remedy to suggest itself. We ask from those in whose hands are the interests of our public schools, a careful consideration of those interests, and corresponding action.

DISTRICT NO. 1.

Miss Tucker, who taught this school, neglected to apply for a certificate until the school had been in operation several weeks. She was then examined, and under existing circumstances received a certificate, although, judging from our visit at the time, her school promised to be of but little benefit. The school was sadly deficient in good order. Several scholars left at recess, so far as we can judge, without permission from the teacher. At the close we were not disappointed. The school was what it promised when first visited.

The winter term, under Mr. Tilton, although not all that could have been desired, was, in our opinion, decidedly better than the summer term. Mr. Tilton had, at least, succeeded in restoring order in the school room. Although the school appeared not to have been drilled sufficiently in the rudiments, yet some classes appeared to good advantage, particularly those in Colburn's Arithmetic.

DISTRICT NO. 2.

The summer school, under Miss Towle, was a successful experiment with a young teacher well qualified for the station. During the school, and at the close, we were convinced that progress was the aim and end of teacher and pupil. Improvement good in all the branches examined.

Miss Gault had charge of the winter school with still increasing success. The improvement made during the year, by the several classes, resulting from the interest of parents, the faithfulness of teachers, the good deportment and application of the scholars, places this district in the front rank. May it never lose its place.

DISTRICT NO. 3.

Both summer and winter terms of this school were again taught by Miss Cofran, who fully sustained her former reputation as an efficient teacher. The closing examinations were satisfactory. Some of the older scholars appeared perfectly to understand the branches taught, so far as their studies had extended; and the smaller ones answered with a promptness deserving commendation, showing close application by both teacher and scholars. The air of neatness that pervaded the school room and the premises about the house, deserve credit.

DISTRICT NO. 4.

Miss Putnam, who had charge of the summer school, considering her age and experience, succeeded admirably in securing the good will and attention of her pupils. The school, when visited, appeared orderly,—questions were answered promptly and understandingly, showing that she had labored hard and to good advantage.

In the winter, although order was not as good as desirable, Miss Garvin was tolerably successful. The closing examination was such as to betoken careful and correct teaching, and proper attention on the part of the scholars.

DISTRICT NO. 5.

Taught in summer by Miss Moore. The school appeared pleasant and well disposed; the examination fair, except the practice on the black-board, which board is greatly wanting in area. Whispering and loud study too common, but corrected in a good measure during the winter term, under Miss Yeaton's charge. Marked improvement appeared, especially in the reading classes. During this term, advance in Geography, Grammar and Arithmetic, were very apparent. And in both terms many little things of value were learned.

DISTRICT NO. 6.

Summer school, under Miss Knowles, passed pleasantly, quietly, and, to appearance, profitably. Good deportment characterized the scholars, and diligent labor the teacher. A medium improvement in the various branches attended to, apparent at the close.

Miss Chesley took charge of the winter school. The perfect system of order established and maintained, the correct conduct and close attention of the pupils, the ready and respectful obedience yielded to the teacher, together with the general improvement in studies, demand for this district a reinstatement in the front rank. The improvement in writing far surpasses that of any other district; perhaps in part, the result of rivalry for a prize promised to the one making the greatest improvement.

DISTRICT NO. 7.

Taught by Miss Hayward. The school, when visited, appeared tolerably fair. A little more spirit and animation from both teacher and scholars would have been an improvement. We were not notified of the close, consequently did not attend. The winter term is now apparently in successful operation, having kept but two weeks. When we visited the school we found Miss Garvin at work in good earnest, and, judging from present appearances, we predict a profitable term.

The wants of this district require a new house, or at least, a thorough remodeling of the old one, which is almost wholly unfit for use, especially in winter, as it affords but little protection from cold. The seats and desks are very inconvenient—it is nearly destitute of black-boards, and almost every other requisite except ventilation, which is abundant, to constitute a good school house. We hope the citizens of this district will awake to their own interests in this matter, and resolve to provide a better school room before the commencement of another term.

DISTRICT NO. 8.

First Division, Miss Thompson teacher both terms. Sometimes we found a good degree of order in the school; sometimes a little confusion. Considerable latitude is required for so large a school of small scholars. The school made evident progress in reading and spelling, which are the principal studies pursued. Many of the little things of primary importance were learned. A good beginning was made by many upon the multiplication table, as well as other tables in arithmetic. Geography commenced. The teacher was assiduous in labor, and "line upon line, precept upon precept," must have been her motto.

The Second Division, in summer taught by Miss Gault. Order and attention good—the movements about the school room quiet, and system appeared prominent in all the arrangements. The Outline Maps were thoroughly traced, and the various classes gave evidence of faithful instruction.

Mr. Couch commenced the winter school under favorable indications, and it appeared highly prosperous and profitable, judging from a few short visits, for the first ten or twelve weeks, when some of the scholars left to attend the Academy, and some for other employments. At our last visit the interest seemed to have flagged in a measure, and our high expectations were not fully realized.

DISTRICT NO. 9.

Miss Brown performed the duties of teacher to general acceptance, so far as we know, both terms. She took things as they were in the book, and required her pupils to learn them so; and they appeared well at the examinations. The improvement in reading, writing and geography was remarkably good, considering all the circumstances.

In most of the districts at the close of the summer terms, the school rooms were tastefully decorated with leaves and flowers, much to the credit of those whose skill and industry were thus exhibited.

This hasty review of the districts is but a transfer to paper of the impressions made upon our own minds by a few short visits. No doubt it will admit of corrections, as will also the following table, which must be imperfect, since some of the registers will not be returned complete till after this report is required for the press; but such as it is, we present it.

No. of District.	Term.	Names of Teachers.	Length of Schools in weeks.	Wages of Teachers per month, exclusive of board.	Number of scholars attending school.	Average attendance.	Number of scholars between 4 and 16.	Number of scholars over 16.	Number of persons between 4 and 14, not attending sch'l.	Number of visits by Superintending Committee.	Number of visits by Prudential Committee.	Number of visits by citizens.	Amount contributed in board and fuel.	Amount of money appropriated to each district.
